

Inbound Fax

"Capturing inbound fax, and conversion to electronic format, enhances subsequent workflow processes and improves time and cost efficiencies"

The Prodocom Inbound fax service can vastly improve business efficiency and workflow processes by having inbound faxed documents automatically converted into electronic format and either emailed to its intended recipient, or passed to a specific network directory.

Many businesses receive large numbers of inbound fax documents such as orders, contracts, remittance advice, application forms and reports, the list is endless. Fax machines typically service small to medium size work groups and often represent the first chain in the workflow process. Subsequent processes can include the manual delivery, or collection of the paper facsimile by its intended recipient, scanning for archiving purposes, data-entry of information contained within the fax, filing of the hardcopy, disposal of the hardcopy and redistribution. By using Prodocom Inbound Fax Service to receive the document as an electronic copy, many of these processes can be achieved automatically.

How does it work?

- » Simply register with Prodocom for an inbound fax number.
- » Clients have a choice of a standard number or a 1300/1800 number.
- » Any documents faxed to this number are automatically converted into PDF, or Group 4 Tiff by the Prodocom Message Server.
- » Files are then routed according to the routing rules associated with the inbound number within the Prodocom Message server. Options include:
 - Archive of document within Prodocom, or Client Archive
 - Delivery to individual via email
 - Delivery to workgroup via email
 - Delivery to Prodocom OCR, or Client OCR for specific data extraction
 - Delivery to specific location on Client network for pick up by subsequent processes/applications
 - Hardcopy printed on Client device
 - Automated response generation to the inbound fax document
